SUGGESTIONS ON MONITORING PACE OF PLAY

- Be polite. Be helpful. Be fair. Be aware of your surroundings – we don't want anyone to drive a cart into a hitting zone!

- Allow groups to establish their pace of play before monitoring. 20 to 30 minutes should be enough.

- When monitoring, travel from the front towards the back of the field. By traveling against the field you are less disruptive and you can see if there is a gap or a hold up before you get to a group.

- Be aware of those areas on the course that are bottlenecks. All courses have them – maybe two long holes back to back, holes where there is a blind shot, or maybe a hole with lots of hazards. Allow a little extra time in these areas. Have spotters here. If a spotter can locate four errant shots, she has potentially saved that group and all groups that follow twenty minutes.

- If you find a group in need of help, it is perfectly acceptable to help rake a bunker, find a club or a ball. Remember in these instances you are an outside agency and therefore are not a part of the competition.
